	Ethics codes are as old	as antiquity. Religious traditions and civic cultures have codes as their foundations. The	Mosaic Decalogue (Ten Commandments) is the keystone for Judaism, Islam and Christianity. Pericles made the Athenian code the underpinning of ancient Greek politics and culture. In each case codes carry general obligations and admonitions, but they are far more than that. They often capture a vision of excellence, of what individuals and societies should be striving for and what they can achieve. In this sense codes, which are often mistaken
Description	as part of law or general statements of mere aspiration, are some of the most important statements of civic expectation Codes are not designed for "bad" people, but for the persons who want to act ethically.
	The bad person will seldom follow a code, while most people – especially public servants welcome ethical guidance in difficult or unclear situations. The average person is not grossly immoral but often tempted, and sometimes confused, by what appears to be a virtuous path.
	"When temptations are significant, when the price of adherence (in terms, for example, of the sacrifice to our interests) is high, when the social consequences of violation (harm to others) are relatively slight, when the costs of violation are low – under such circumstances it is easy to be led from doing what you ought to do is very important.

Description	preading Human Rights awareness among the common people in their language is vital for creating a culture of human rights. Unless people are aware about their human rights they cannot protect their rights or seek redressal when it is violated. The language of Human Rights Awareness literature, thus, should be simple enough to be understood by common people. NHRC, Chairperson Dr. Justice A.S.Anand said this at the concluding session of the two-day National Seminar in Hindi on the Concepts of Human Rights in Indian Culture & Importance of Human Rights Education in India, organized by the Commission in New Delhi on 2-3 March 2006. He said that all religions are inspired in their own way by an innate concept of Human Rights. He emphasized that rights and duties are interlinked. While rights without duties lead to arrogance, duties without rights lead to slavery. Hence, there is a need to maintain balance between rights and duties, he stressed.
